

Trademark/Licensing Attorney Wanted

The Leading Edge Law Group, PLC (“LELG”), is looking for an attorney who has substantial experience in trademark matters.

About LELG:

- We are a three-lawyer IP boutique law firm located in Richmond, Virginia. Our practice includes patents, trademarks, copyrights and licensing.
- LELG has an extensive technology infrastructure and extensive IP legal resources.
- Our offices are in the heart of downtown Richmond in Three James Center, overlooking the James River. We have a modern YMCA in our building and are in the middle of a great restaurant district.
- LELG is recommended by Chambers USA and holds a Martindale AV rating. John Farmer is listed in Best Lawyers in America.

About the Position:

- We are seeking an experienced trademarks-and-licensing attorney. One of our trademark attorneys, Amy Ashworth, suspended her legal practice for at least a few years to focus on her family’s needs. We need to replace her.
- We have sufficient work to keep a part-time attorney busy. Thus we seek to hire either a part-time attorney, or a full-time attorney who either has a partial book of business or is entrepreneurial about growing one.
- A candidate must have each of these attributes to be considered:
 - At least four years of intellectual property experience in a reputable legal environment,
 - Substantial experience in marks counseling, clearance, application prosecution and policing,
 - Substantial experience in technology contracting (e.g., software licensing, computer-related services agreements),
 - Exposure to copyright matters, including copyright registration,
 - A reputation for doing high-quality work and for staying abreast of relevant IP legal developments,
 - Solid educational credentials,
 - Good writing and client-counseling ability, and
 - A friendly and kind personality.
- While not required, an ideal candidate also would have intellectual property litigation experience and have had exposure to patent matters.
